The Cheney home, located in Florida, in April, 1916, Mrs. Cheney obtained an order for $3,000 a year against her husband, which amounted to $4,000 pending a decision on his appeal in court. Pending a decision on his appeal in court, he was released by the authorities at the Hotel de Cluny, Brooklyn. The operation of certain clauses is not expected to be settled until the end of the baseball season.

THE NEW PLAYS

"Leave It to Jane"
Good Entertainment

BY CHARLES DARNTON.

YOUTH survives everything in the theatrical world. It is an easy matter, therefore, to say that "Leave It to Jane" is good entertainment as it goes along Broadway. We take things as they come and go. Occasionally, they "go" very well in a new form. Years ago, "The College Widow" gave George Ade a claim upon New York's liking for youthful fun, and now this same comedy of a college town has been turned to new account by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, with their facility for writing lyrics, and also by Jerome Kern, a composer, if you like, quite in tune with the period.

Everything at the Longacre Theatre last night was quite up to date. There is no reason to take a great deal of newspaper space in saying that the revival of Mr. Ade's fruiless affair, in fresh guise, is quite as enlivening as it was in its original form. In fact, it gained something last night by way of Mr. Kern's sprightly tunes and by verses that added to the joy of song.

You are sure to like "Leave It to Jane." You needn't leave it to any one but yourself. A decidedly clever cast makes this assurance doubly sure. When Gertrude Quinlan played a prominent waitress* in the original play she seemed to offer a challenge that no other "type" actress might be willing to accept. Yet Georgia O'Keeffe faced this sort of new ground and made it something quite her own by acting and singing in an individual way. The only bumps that Miss O'Reilly experienced were those that she took of her own accord when she hit the stage without a cushion to her name. In short, she was superbly fine, and she didn't seem to mind in the least that she is an exceptionally good-looking young woman with dagger stage possibilities. It was her pleasure to come down with a thump and then look surprised—as though the world didn't appreciate her charms.

And here with a cast of ten she may have been, and refreshingly free from affectation, enthralled in the proceedings most heartily. Her smile was enough in itself to win admiration. You saw her and you liked her—that's all there was about it. Edith Hallor, as "the college widow," was altogether charming. Moreover, she sang well. Arline Chase, too, figured prettily in a "Panthy" song called "Watch My Step," doing her bit with real grace.

Both as an eccentric comedian and as an accomplished dancer, Olin Howland scored in the part of the "greenhorn" who comes to college reluctantly, only to remain and get the fashion of the upper-middle-class. Thomas Dohman, as the amateur football player whose shoes hurt him, and Dan Cawver, as the trainer of the team, came back to their old parts and once again scored hits. Pretty chorus girls added materially in making "Leave It to Jane" a jolly success.

Miss Dennis will wed Daniel Grant this month.

Daniel Grant, Fort Wayne, twenty-eight, a member of the Officers Reserve Corps, of No. 45 West Fifty-seventh Street, and Marjorie Constantine Dennis, of the same address, will be married Saturday evening. They said they would be married some time in October.

Do you realize what it means to lean over a wash tub of smelly clothes and look through the steam and muck down into the eyes of your own hungry baby? Could you stand the tension on your heart strings when the hood of the car jammed against the store window above?

A great crowd soon gathered, but no one seemed to know how to go about rescuing the imprisoned ones. Mrs. Engelman could be heard reassuring her children, whose screams added to the confusion.

Two policemen finally brought a stout rope from a subway station. The rope was attached to the rear of the car and a score of volunteers pulled the automobile up far enough so that the policemen could lift out the occupants.

Mrs. Engelman kept her head throughout the trying situation. The moment she was released she turned her attention to her father, Gertz was unconscious and Dr. Van Ness, who took him to Hudson Street Hospital, said he had suffered severe lacerations of the head and body, possible internal injuries. Mrs. Engelman and the children were taken home in an automobile. Gertz is an inspector for the H. R. T.
